of Nepal will not only give you a view of the mountains, but also take you through remote villages inhabited by hospitable people who will always welcome you smiling. We invite you to join us on visit to this remote region to see the truth of your dream.

Trekking Styles:

There are very various ways of trekking on foot through Himalayan range of Nepal. When you are planning a trek you need to think carefully about different styles of trekking available. Remember that when hiking in any major range of the mountains, it makes sense to go with at least one well-chosen companion, as a slip and a sprained ankle can acquire at any time. It is also prudent to register with your embassy before setting off, and to sign in at any police checkpoint along the way.

Typical Trekking Days:

Most of days begin with stunning Himalayas sunrise when the crew bring around a piping hot cup of tea and a warm bowl of washing water. After hearty breakfast cooked we generally walk for 3 to 4 hours. You are encouraged to walk at your own pace, stopping frequently for photographs or to explore local villages. There is a lot of leisureed time, you are allowed to rinse out clothes, read novel books or explore small mounds. .

The journey on the Himalayas varies in length to reach our campsite or lodge by the afternoon. The rest of the day is free to explore, read or write up diaries while dinner is being prepared by the trekking staff. The evening is spent in the mess tent or lodge following a three course meal. On our higher altitude treks, rest and exploration days are built in to ensure proper acclimatization. So Samrat Tours & Travels P. Ltd classified his trekking into three types.
